

JAILED AS FORGER; BRIDE SAVES HIM

Pathetic Romance in Which Young Woman's Trust
Never Wavered.

Husband Squandered All of Wife's Money on Pleasures
She Did Not Share.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The release from the city jail of E. S. Leonard revealed a romance of love forcing open the prison doors. The young wife, with a devotion wonderful in view of all the circumstances, captured her husband from his jealous guardians and marched away with her arm locked in his. It was her faith bridging a crime which had been committed during their honeymoon.

Leonard's wife was Miss Edith A. Keadle. After only two months of acquaintance she married Leonard April 11 last, and, less than a month of wifehood having been hers, she found him arrested for forgery. The police had every intention of prosecuting their prisoner, and against them was pitted his only friend, his wife.

Wife Works for Husband's Release.

Her husband was no sooner imprisoned than she set about to secure his release. She interviewed officers and never failed to see her husband, assure him of her love and devotion, and whisper to him that she would bring him liberty.

Success finally came when she secured money with which to make good Leonard's forgeries and mollified the aggrieved parties, who are his relatives in New York.

Leonard came here less than three months ago, wooed and won the beautiful girl to whom he owes his freedom, and informed her on their wedding day that he was without money. He said that funds would arrive soon from home.

Spent $400 Belonging to His Wife.

Mrs. Leonard got $400 from her mother. The bridegroom quickly became the custodian of this sum, and spent it largely upon pleasure. His wife was not a sharer in. He once more announced his penniless state, but repeated the story that he had money coming. He did not await its arrival, however, but became a forger, and cashed bogus checks for several hundred dollars.

The police were enlightened, and three nights ago arrested Leonard as he was walking on South Grand avenue with his wife. They say he is a smooth crook, but the young wife will not doubt him, except that he fell under stress of a sudden temptation.

Miners Follow Phantom; Discover a Rich Vein

Weird Story of a Colorado Youth and a
Spiritualist Who Were Led to Fabulous
Wealth Guarded by a Skeleton.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., May 8.—After an absence of five years, James E. Treagle, a former Colorado City boy, returned from the Lee mining district of Nevada, where he discovered a mine worth many thousands of dollars.

About a year ago he formed a partnership with Allen Jeffries, of Minneapolis, and together they went prospecting in Death valley. Jeffries had been a lifelong believer of Swedenborg, and often around the campfire had claimed to "see things," especially the shade of an old prospector seemed to haunt him. He often would converse with the spirit.

One evening they were on the edge of Death valley, near Lee, when Jeffries exclaimed, "There is the old prospector now." He beckoned to Treagle to follow and started out over the rocks in pursuit of the phantom, which he said was pointing to a ledge of rocks. There they found a prospect hole, and near it the bleached bones of a human being. A rifle and prospector's outfit lay near by. Evidently the man had become overcome by the heat and had died alone. They gave the remains a respectful burial and then examined the hole. The rock was found to be porphyry bearing, containing free gold. Treagle and his partner then struck off the claim and began the assessment work, and a month ago they refused $200,000 for the mine.

Dr. Reyburn, the retiring president, was greeted by the entire body of members and guests, standing. A telegram was read from Dr. John V. Shoemaker, president-elect, regretting his inability to be present.

FAVORS SHOOTING RECKLESS DRIVERS

BOSTON, May 8.—Prompted by three cases of death or injury resulting from persons being struck by automobiles within the last week, Major Henry L. Higginson, widely known as a banker, issued an open letter in which he said: "It would be an interesting question whether a man shooting a chauffeur in defense of his life on the road would be punished, and certainly the danger from an automobile is much greater than the ordinary foot-ped."

"It is to be wished that the automobile sinners should have to lay out the bodies of the men, women and children—and dogs—which they kill in order that they may get a realizing sense of their sport."

PLAN TO STUDY LATIN-AMERICA

Columbia Professor Starts
on Saturday to Visit
Eight Countries.

Prof. William R. Shepherd, of Columbia University, spent the day in Washington arranging the final details with the State Department, and Bureau of American Republics for his tour of South America as educational commissioner. Prof. Shepherd will sail from New York next Saturday, to be gone five months, during which time he will visit eight Latin-American countries.

Prof. Shepherd is being sent on the South American tour by Columbia University, in pursuance of a scheme promoted by President Butler, of that institution, with the sanction of the State Department and co-operation of the Bureau of American Republics. It is President Butler's idea to have Prof. Shepherd learn something about the educational and art work of South America and at the same time let the people there know the educational advantages of American universities.

"I shall begin my work in Panama," said Prof. Shepherd, speaking of his trip, "and then visit in turn Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil. In each country I expect to visit the leading universities, study the educational work, look into the archives, see what is being done in the way of art, and confer with the public officials, particularly the departments of foreign affairs."

Upon his return Prof. Shepherd will deliver a lecture on his trip in Cooper Union, New York, and within the next year he will doubtless deliver lectures on the subject in a number of large cities throughout the country. Shepherd will procure in each country visited data and statistics concerning commerce, industries, etc., the use of the Bureau of American Republics. Prof. Shepherd had a long conference with John Barrett, director of the bureau.

Prof. Shepherd stated that he would in no wise represent Andrew Carnegie's Association for International Conciliation, as he at first agreed to, which Senor Mendoza was to have been the head.

"The object was a laudable one," said Prof. Shepherd, "but I do not think Mr. Carnegie understood Senor Mendoza's real standing when he accepted his proposition that he be made the head of a permanent peace mission to South America, at a handsome figure."
